

- 3 A country is producing at point X on its production possibility curve (PPC) which shows how it can allocate its production between capital goods and consumer goods.

A period of recession then causes some of its factories to close.

Which point could represent the country's new position?

