AO3 Analysis • A mission statement may provide direction which allows a business to develop tactics and strategy and meet objectives such as profit and sales. • Without the direction a business' stakeholders may pull in different directions leading to inefficiency, increased costs, failure. • If mission statements did not work they would not be used by so many businesses. • A business may spend significant time formulating a mission statement which is so general that it has little relation to actual direction of the business and does not provide focus. • A business may be so focused on a 'pre-set' mission that it misses new opportunities which could allow the business to diversify. • A mission statement might add no value to the business, increasing costs with no increase in profit/profitability. AO4 Evaluation • What are the most important factors that could affect the impact of a mission statement on a bank? • Changes in the dynamic business environment can make a mission statement set several years ago seem irrelevant. • Are mission statements often little more than vague statements or wish lists that few believe in? • Can mission statements really influence strategic and tactical business decisions when most banks are trying to maximise profits? • To what extent might factors such as exceptional leadership in a bank or a carefully crafted bank mission statement affect the importance and influence of a bank mission statement? • Mission statements can also have an external impact and allow businesses to be made accountable to stakeholders. • Judgement made on the significance or importance of mission statements. Analyse two possible disadvantages to a business of using performance-related pay to motivate its employees. Use Table D to mark each candidate response. AO1 out of 2 marks. AO2 out of 2 marks. AO3 out of 4 marks. Indicative content Responses may include: AO1 Knowledge and understanding • Performance-related pay (PRP) links salaries/wages to an assessment of performance measured against pre-agreed performance criteria. • PRP may set non-achievable targets. • May lead to conflict between employees. AO2 Application • Often used to remunerate employees whose output is not measurable in quantitative terms such as management/supervisory/clerical posts. • An optional reward/motivation method for employees who are considered to have given exceptional performance. AO3 Analysis • For some employees PRP is seen as a device to intensify work demands, increase productivity leading to worker exploitation and high stress. • It can lead to rifts and divisions in teams if some are not included in a PRP scheme – they will feel their work is less valued. • There are problems in deciding how to measure 'above average' performance – employees' views will differ from managers' views. • PRP can put power into the hands of managers leading to favouritism or discrimination. • It requires detailed information about employees and their jobs.	6
