

Exercise walk-through

Politics in the Gilded Age ■ 6.13

eXercise

You must be able to

- state what inspired the People's (Populist) Party and what it called for
- name the two things the major parties contended over
- state what reformers argued
- state how political machines thrived

Method — Populism

Economic instability inspired agrarian activists to create the People's (Populist) Party, which called for a stronger governmental role in regulating the American economic system. The direct answer to 6.12's laissez-faire position.

Method — Party contention

The major political parties appealed to lingering divisions from the Civil War and contended over tariffs and currency issues. A backward-looking appeal alongside two economic questions.

Method — Reformers' argument

Reformers argued that economic greed and self-interest had corrupted all levels of government. “All levels” — the charge is systemic, not against particular officeholders.

Method — Machines

In an urban atmosphere where the access to power was unequally distributed, political machines thrived, in part by providing immigrants and the poor with social services. The CED explains their success by what they supplied.

Practice 2.1 ■ 2 marks

State what inspired the Populist Party and what it called for.

Solution 2.1

Method: Populism

Worked steps

economic instability inspired agrarian activists to create it B1; it called for a stronger governmental role in regulating the American economic system B1.

Practice 2.2 ■ 2 marks

State how political machines thrived.

Solution 2.2

Method: Machines

Worked steps

access to power was unequally distributed in cities B1, and machines provided immigrants and the poor with social services B1.

Practice 2.3 ■ 2 marks

Reformers made a systemic charge.

- (a) State it and the force of “all levels”.
- (b) Name the two economic questions the parties contended over.

Solution 2.3

Worked steps

(a) that economic greed and self-interest had corrupted government B1; “all levels” makes the charge systemic rather than against particular officeholders B1. (b) tariffs and currency issues B1.

Exam-style 3.1 ■ 1 mark

The Populist Party called for

- A a stronger governmental role in regulating the economic system
- B laissez-faire
- C an end to elections
- D higher immigration

Solution 3.1

Method: Populism

A a stronger governmental role in regulating the economic system

B laissez-faire

C an end to elections

D higher immigration

Worked steps

A. stronger regulation.

Exam-style 3.2 ■ 1 mark

Political machines thrived in part by providing immigrants and the poor with

A social services

B land grants

C railroad shares

D military protection

Solution 3.2

Method: Machines

A social services

B land grants

C railroad shares

D military protection

Worked steps

A. social services.

Exam-style 3.3 ■ 1 mark

An organisation is corrupt and supplies services nobody else provides.

- (a) State why it endures.
- (b) Explain the difficulty this creates for reformers.

Solution 3.3

Worked steps

(a) because those services are needed and unavailable elsewhere B1. (b) removing the machine removes the services with it B1, so reform must replace what it destroys or lose the support of those who relied on it B1.