Recount an experience with a clear result – speak and write

Retell the search without reading. Your partner asks where the phone was and whether the train was missed.

■ Plan and write

Write a short connected account of losing and finding an object. Change the location and outcome.

- Establish when and where.
- Keep the search sequence clear.
- State the actual outcome.

■ Remember

Do not add details to a source-based retelling simply because they seem likely. For your own fictional story, make the details consistent.

Write a paragraph proposing a time change, explaining a benefit and a remaining limitation.

- Keep the reference of 这个安排 clear.
- Use a result connector for a result.
- Do not turn a partial improvement into universal success.

■ Remember

More participants does not mean everyone can attend. Keep qualifiers such as 有些 in your explanation.
