Operations Management

University Business · Vocabulary in context

Word	Example
operations management /ˌɒpəˈreɪʃnz ˈmænɪdʒmənt/	Operations management organises how a firm makes its goods.
bottleneck /ˈbɒtəlnek/	The mixer is the bottleneck: it is the slowest step.
cycle time	A cycle time of 12 minutes means a batch finishes every 12 minutes. 12 12
throughput /ˈθruːpɒt/	Throughput is how many batches the line makes per hour.
capacity utilisation /kəˈpæsɪti ˌjuːtɪlaɪˈzeɪʃn/	Capacity utilisation compares what a factory makes with the most it could make.
Little's law	Little's law links the work in progress, the throughput and the time on the line. ` work in progress	Work in progress is the unfinished batches on the line.
statistical process control	Statistical process control spots a problem before bad products are sent out.
control chart	The control chart showed one sample outside the limits.
Pareto analysis	Pareto analysis shows that a few causes make most of the faults.
economic order quantity	The economic order quantity is the best amount to order each time.

exercises.lol exercises.com.cn

Word	Example
reorder point	When stock falls to the reorder point, a new order is sent.
safety stock	Safety stock is extra stock kept in case demand is higher than expected.
moving average /ˈmuːvɪŋ ˈævrɪdʒ/	A moving average smooths out ups and downs in sales.
exponential smoothing	Exponential smoothing forecasts sales by giving recent weeks more weight.
mean absolute deviation	The mean absolute deviation shows how far forecasts are from actual sales.
lead time /liːd taɪm/	The lead time is the wait between ordering and delivery.
risk pooling	Risk pooling means keeping stock in one place, so less safety stock is needed.
square-root law	The square-root law says joining depots reduces the safety stock needed.
postponement	With postponement, products are finished only after orders come in.
critical path /ˈkrɪtɪkl pæθ/	A delay on the critical path delays the whole project.
total float /ˈtəʊtl fləʊt/	A task with five days of total float can be late by five days.
crashing	Crashing means paying extra to finish a task faster.

Word	Example
earned value analysis	Earned value analysis compares the work done with the money spent.
carbon footprint /ˈkɑːbən ˈfʊtprɪnt/	The bakery's carbon footprint is the carbon dioxide it causes each week.
system boundary /ˈsɪstəm ˈbaʊndəri/	Where you draw the system boundary changes what you count.

exercises.lol exercises.com.cn